

WPA MEN PLAN PLAY PROGRAM

Recreational Project for Morrow County Discussed With Leaders at Mansfield

Special to The Star—A plan to launch a country-wide recreational program for the summer months was launched at the WPA school Friday afternoon when a group of men from Morrow county met to confer with Mrs. V. C. Clark and Edwin Krich of the WPA office at Mansfield.

The WPA officials explained that a county program could be set up through the local council which was formed last year and which set up a program which was not carried out because the WPA funds for the purpose were exhausted.

A project for this county has been approved and WPA officials have announced that $100,000 has been set aside. The only local play will be for recreational supply and equipment. Any type of recreation can be carried on under the program in the various room municipalities.

A county supervisor will be appointed from outside the county and his assistants will be approximately 10 young men and women boys and girls from the WPA. They will be training for the work in a special training school at some nearby college.

A committee was named to proceed with the selection of an executive committee for the county. The members are Dr. Frank Sweeney of Mt. Pleasant, B. J. Bishop of Johnsonville, D. R. Standfield of Edison and John J. Klenz of Cardington.

NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN—MARION THEATER PROGRAMS

HEADING the program for next week at the Palace will be the immortal "Show Boat," starring Irene Dunne, which will be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, with a midweek show tonight. Wednesday there will be a stage show, "Parishan Follies," and a comedy, "Fish from Hell." And so they were married, and the last three days of the week will bring one of the much-discussed pictures, "These Three."

Allan Jones, who scored in "A Night at the Opera." Paul Robeson, internationally famous Negro scholar and singer, Charles Winninger who played the original "Captain Andy," on the stage and is known to millions of radio listeners as the captain of a national Show Boat program, Helen Morgan, night club entertainer and a hit in the original stage production of "Show Boat," and Helen Wesley whose specialty is the life-size characters, all support Miss Dunne in the latest production of "Show Boat."

Edna Ferber's world famous novel was first produced on the Broadway stage in 1926, on the London stage in 1928 and 1929, was revived on Broadway in 1932 and was made into a picture.

Oscar Hammerstein II wrote the screen play for the present production and Jerome Kern wrote the musical score. In addition to the featured players mentioned, the cast includes Donald Cook, Quennie Smith, Hatlie McDaniell, J. Farrell MacDonald, Patricia Barry, Sunnie O'Dea and Charles Wilson.

A total cast of more than 3,500 persons, including a singing chorus of 200 voices, was used in the production.

Miss Dunne and Jones sing "Why Do I Love You" and "Make Believe." Miss Morgan sings "Bill" and "Can't Help Lovin' That Man." Other songs which will be heard are "Old Fashioned Wife," "Cotton Blossom," "After the Ball" and "Goodbye My Lady Love."

Robeson, whose baritone voice has thrilled hundreds of thousands of persons all over the world and who was unforgettable in his role in the British picture, "Sanders of the River," sings "Old Man River" and "Ah Still Suits Me." Miss Dunne also sings a sprightly number, "Gallivantin' Around."

PRINCIPALS IN "THESE THREE" AT PALACE

2 PICTURES AT OHIO FOR WEEK

"A Message to Garcia" and "Everybody's Old Man" Theater's Offering.

Elbert Hubbard's immortal essay and Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan's book suggested the picture, "A Message to Garcia," which opened a four-day stay at the Ohio today. The last three days of the week, through Friday, will be given over to romance and comedy in the picture, "Everybody's Old Man," starring Irvin S. Cobb, writer, humorist and one of the closest friends of the late Will Rogers. Gamma Mu chapter of Delta Theta Tau sorority will sponsor the Cobb picture.

"A Message to Garcia" was created from the story of a true adventure that changed the destiny of three nations. John Boles is the man entrusted with the message, seeking Garcia somewhere in the tropical interior of Cuba. Aided by Beery, a clownish renegade, he sets off into the dangerous jungle until they meet Miss Stanwyck who offers to lead them to Garcia.

Garcia's forces to his friend's rescue.

When Beery started making the picture he liked bananas. When the picture was finished so was Beery—with bananas. When he received his copy of the script he became alarmed over the fact that it called for a two-day diet of bananas. He said "no" to the studio, and the studio countered with a lengthy report pointing out that bananas were high in nutrition value and correspondingly low in fattening tendencies. Beery capitulated and ate one entire banana for each take through two days' work. It was pleasant going the first few times, but by the time the second day was closed, Beery vowed that there would be no more bananas for him.

Rochelle Hudson heads the supporting cast in "Everybody's Old Man" with Johnny Downs, Alan Dinehart, Sara Haden, Norman Foster and Warren Hymer, playing minor roles of importance.

In the picture Cobb proves that the reason you can't teach an old dogger new tricks is that he's too busy teaching young folks the ones he knows.

The plot deals with a retired captain of industry who adopts the reckless children of his former competitor. To straighten them out, and to show the nephew he left in charge of his own plant a trick or two, Cobb takes charge of their deteriorating business.

Cobb, reviewing his career, recently decided that he has "reached the bottom of the ladder," meaning that at last he has become a full-fledged motion picture actor.

"Until two years ago I was a sensible man," he said. "Until that time he was one of the best of the newspaper writers, a novelist and contributor to the nation's leading magazines, a dabbler at radio and an after-dinner speaker with a reputation. Then he went west, denounced his portly frame in the exalted quarters of what had once been Garbo's home and things began to happen. First he was cast in a series of short comedies and then Will Rogers persuaded him to make his debut in a feature-length picture and in "Steamboat Round the Bend," Cobb became a full-fledged motion picture favorite.

Cobb is a native of Paducah, Ky., and he claims to have been the youngest managing editor of a daily newspaper in the country—the Paducah daily sheet.

"Big" Actress in Little Theater Finds Film Fame Hard to Earn

BY JEANNE PERKINS

Miss Perkins, a "stock player," today tells what an unknown, placed under studio contract, may expect to find in films. This is one of a series of articles by motion picture performers.

HOLLYWOOD — Four months ago I was having a grand time attending Louisiana State university, going to parties, and being a "big actress" in the "little theater." Always I felt that Hollywood and films would be my red apple to lose around as I pleased if I could just get a chance.

Then I was interviewed by a talent scout. After our talk, he handed me a three months' contract. My worries were over—I thought—but after two weeks in the studio I found they had only begun. First and foremost, I possessed a southern accent which is definitely not wanted in pictures. In our "stock school"—a dramatic school for pictures—I've almost lost the accent, I hope.

In this school we young hopefuls study voice and pant mime daily. We read scripts and work as "extras" on sets. This gives us opportunity to study the work of successful players. We are made welcome on all the sets and we all for hours watching the companies work.

Mr. Oakie Was Genial

My first picture as an extra was in "Florida Special," starring Jack Oakie. Only then did I begin to realize how many people and things all work together to make a picture. Of course Mr. Oakie was genial, and he made us all feel at ease.

Then some of us worked on "Poppy" with W. C. Fields. He was grand to us, telling us many of the tricks and gags of the trade that he had used. Mr. Edward Sutherland, the director, treated his cast to "tiffin" every afternoon—he main-

2 FIRST RATE FILMS BOOKED

"Follow the Fleet" and "Magnificent Obsession" Coming to State Theater.

Two outstanding film productions and an exciting "reps and robbers" feature are on tap for State theater patrons in the week beginning Sunday.

The latest Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers dancing feature, "Follow the Fleet," has been booked for Sunday and Monday. On Tuesday the famous Lloyd C. Douglas story, "Magnificent Obsession," comes in for a three-day run. Friday and Saturday brings Preston Foster in "Moss" and a John Wayne western, "Lawless Range."

The dancing feat of Fred Astaire dominates the third record smashing hit he and his titian-haired partner have made in a little more than a year. San Francisco melting pot of world romance and magnet for the ships of the seven seas, is caught at its most colorful moment—when the U. S. fleet is in—as the background for "Follow the Fleet."

Irving Berlin, one of the country's best musical scores, has done the complete musical score, which includes such popular numbers as "I'm Putting All My Eggs in One Basket," "Face the Music and Dance," "Let Yourself Go," and "Here I Am, But Where Are You?" In the supporting cast are Harriet Hilliard, Randolph Scott and Astrid Allwyn.

"Magnificent Obsession" which recently played here first run, boasts a distinguished cast headed by such players as Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor, Charles Butterworth, Betty Furness, Ralph Brown, Henry Armetta, Gilbert Emery, Crawford Kent, Beryl Mercer, Cora Sue Collins, Arthur Treacher, Purnell Pratt and Lucien Littlefield. "Magnificent Obsession" was created for the screen by John Stahl, who gave the movie-going public "East Street," "Only Yesterday" and "Imitation of Life."

His current release was one of the outstanding pictures of the last movie season. The book by Lloyd S. Douglas is still in demand in libraries throughout the country.

Preston Foster is rapidly coming to the fore as one of the most popular "re-nen" actors on the screen. Audiences will find him a hot boiled cop in "Moss" and "Em Up," booked for Friday and Saturday showing at the State. The romantic interest is furnished by Margaret Callahan. On the same bill is the popular western player, John Wayne, in his latest release, "Lawless Range."

Former Roosevelt Associate New Deal Opposition Leader

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When young Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York became assistant secretary of the navy in President Wilson's "cabinet of young men," 27-year-old Henry Breckinridge, of an illustrious Kentucky family, became assistant secretary of war.

Today, one of those young assistant secretaries is President of the United States; the other is his declared foe, a stern critic of his new deal, and a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

It is said Colonel Breckinridge has no thought of capturing the nomination from President Roosevelt—that his plan is to rally behind him voters dissatisfied with the present administration.

Spot-Lighted in 1914

This does not mark his first move to oppose the new deal, nor is it the first fight, political or otherwise, in which he has been a participant. Two years ago he announced his candidacy for the senate on the "Constitutional party" ticket in New York, but was submerged in the torrent of Democratic votes.

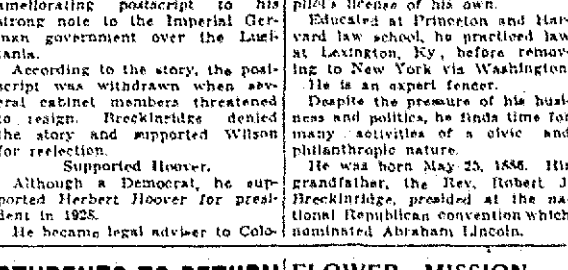

In 1916 he was the center of a political tempest when a professor alleged Breckinridge told him President Wilson had penned an ameliorating postscript to his strong note to the Imperial German government over the Lusitania.

According to the story, the postscript was withdrawn when several cabinet members threatened to resign. Breckinridge denied the story and supported Wilson for reelection.

Supported Hoover

He became legal adviser to Col-

MIDDLETOWN FETES STEEL EXECUTIVE

By The Associated Press

MIDDLETOWN, O., June 4.—Middletown and the Miami valley paid tribute today to one of the men credited with putting the city on the map as a steel-manufacturing center.

Virtually the entire community of 33,000 suspended business to honor George M. Verity, chairman of the board of the American Rolling Mill Co., who coming here in 1910, has become known as Middletown's "citizen No. 1."

All stores were to close at 1 p. m. and shortly thereafter a parade of an estimated 1,000 persons and a score of bands took place through the city.

SURVEY OF CITY NEARS FINISH

Marion's first real property inventory being made by WPA workers, probably will be completed in July and shortly afterward the most comprehensive survey of the city's lands and buildings ever made will become available for public inspection.

The survey reports will be submitted to Washington for approval before they become public. Paul G. Hobart, director of the WPA city inventory, said.

The inventory, like similar surveys in other Ohio cities, is carried on as a work progress administration project, employing workers from the relief rolls, and is under the sponsorship of the Marion county commissioners. It provided, at the start, work for more than 50 men and women, and at the present time employs 35 people.

The work, which started in February of this year under a federal grant of approximately $12,000, plus a sponsor's contribution of $400, is being carried on at the Marion county relief office on South Prospect street, where a staff of engineers, draftsmen, tabulators and clerks are busily engaged in classifying and arranging the data collected by the field enumerators preliminary to the final report to be released in July.

Large Area Covered

Enumeration in the Marion project includes the built-up area outside the city limits, as well as all home, business and industrial establishments within the city. Although no household was forced to answer questions, less than 25 Marion residents refused to give the required information.

When filled out, the inventory blank answers such questions as length of time occupants have lived in each dwelling, monthly rents, services included in the rent, number of rooms and condition of each house, conveniences such as hot and cold water, lighting, heating, refrigeration and sanitary equipment, age and race of the residents, number of extra families in each house and value of entire property. Types of dwellings and number of vacant living units are also enumerated.

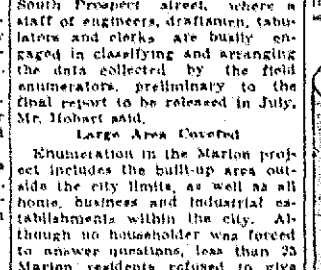

Following the enumeration, which was completed on April 3, a staff of editors and tabulators in the central office classified the cards and since that date have been tabulating the results. The complete result of the Marion inventory will be summarized in 10 tables and interpreted in 17 detailed maps of the city.

Cheekers Authenticate Data

To insure accuracy of the inventory "spot checkers" were sent back to many of the houses and their cards compared with those of the original enumerators. A force of surveyors checked measurements, building area and other data necessary to map the city.

Information on individual homes is considered confidential, only city wide and square block tabulations being announced in the final report, being prepared by Mr. Hobart.

In a solemn, history making session, a special tribunal appointed by the British parliament has named J. H. Thomas, who resigned last week from the colonial secretaryship, as the man who gave away the cabinet's budget secrets. Armed with the information, two friends of Mr. Thomas, Sir Alfred Butt, N. P., and Alfred C. C. Bates, publisher, profited through successful insurance speculations with Lloyd's. The tribunal did not impute to Mr. Thomas motives of personal gain. Nor did it see anything sinister in the fact that Mr. Bates had paid the ex-cabinet minister a large sum of money in advance for a biography that has not yet been started. But it did see to payment of the money evidence of the close friendship between the two men.

Already scores of commentators have upheld Mr. Thomas' personal honesty and sympathized with him in his trouble, while he has maintained his denial of the charges. But in face of the tribunal's report, only one conclusion appears to be tenable. Mr. Thomas did permit some budget secrets to escape him, willingly or otherwise, and he did so under the subtle emotional pressures of friendship.

History of men in public life is replete with incidents of leaders being betrayed or defected by their friends. It has not mattered much whether the friends have been actuated by altruistic ideals or by motives of personal gain as was the case with Mr. Thomas' friendly enemies.

When a public leader relies too closely upon the advice of friends or even takes them too much into his confidence, immediately he is beset by the pressures of emotion. He cannot think his way through to a course of logical action. He is surrounded by those friendly enemies who, consciously or not, detract from the sum of loyalty which the leader is able to give to the tasks in hand.

Discovery.

"The masses of the American people have discovered their power and will continue to exercise it, no matter who visits the White House," Bruce Barton, advertising expert, tells members of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

Barton, retained by the Republican national committee as publicity consultant, also says it is the job of business men to explain to the people, exercising their power, why they would do well to use it to have a system of free economic competition and initiative.

The idea that the masses have "discovered" power seems to entail an assumption that they never discovered it before. Unfortunately, it is difficult to follow that line of reasoning. The masses have been discovering power for hundreds of years and just as regularly fighting to keep it out of the hands of men abroad enough to exploit it, sometimes to their own disadvantage.

With all respect to Mr. Barton, who senses the importance of a broad popular foundation for political appeals, it is suggested that discovery of power by the masses is a good deal like discovering the potentialities of good which exist in every man. Such things aren't really discovered. They are forgotten, then remembered.

When it is discovered how to change power, either in an individual or in the masses, to beneficial results, that really will be something. It is a stiff task Mr. Barton has set for business men who need to make clear to 130,000,000 people why the masses would be served best if they used their power to protect their liberty. However, since business men, themselves, are part of the masses, in a broad sense, the job isn't impossible. At least they are capable of understanding each other.

Four Out of Five.

Announcement that the federal government had $10,415 civil service employees on its payroll at the end of April—an increase of 4,383 over the previous month—might add a few more gray hairs to the aging and exasperated taxpayers. It might, too, give a chance to cynical statisticians to let their pencils and imaginations run wild.

Cynics, for instance, might recall that in 1924 it was reliably estimated that only about 75 per cent of federal employees were on civil service. Using the same basis, they'd calculate that at least 1,100,000 persons must be on the permanent payroll of Uncle Sam. Then they might add the same amount to take care of the "emergency" employees who have flocked to Washington in the last four years.

Dazzled by the total of 2,700,000 federal employees, the cynics might be tempted to estimate the number of employees on all governmental payrolls—state, county and municipal. Figuring that the District of Columbia is only one unit and that there are 48 times that many states, the statisticians might let their multiplying apparatus run amuck and announce there must be at least 125,000,000 persons on governmental payrolls—more than four out of every five.

It can't be that bad, common sense suggests, but the way governmental employment is soaring, it can't be long before astronomical figures are reached.

Death Interferes.

It is dangerously easy to forget that death is the unseen member of every conference. An abrupt reminder was given to all Americans by the wholly unexpected passing of Joseph Byrns, speaker of the national house of representatives.

In an instant, plans for adjournment of congress this week were destroyed. It only for reasons of formality, representatives and senators will not leave Washington in a Saturday night rush. Respect for speaker Byrns will hold them in the city.

The Roosevelt administration's legislative leadership group has been robbed of a vitally important member. The late speaker, who reached his position by the slow but thorough preparation of a quarter of a century of waiting for a sufficient accumulation of seniority, understood his job well. He was an unifying influence.

His death struck at Rep. Byrns earlier in the congressional session now closing. It might have made a material difference in the course of legislative action. It will be noted that Rep. Byrns, who was proud of his leadership of the congressional campaign which gave Democrats a majority in the house, probably has missed the declaration of the unwieldy membership which he helped to control. An increasing number of Republicans might have made his task even more difficult in the next session.

Speakership of the house has become a hard job, made dangerous by the fact that the incumbent is likely to be a man of advanced age. Rep. Byrns, possibly, was a victim of strain. Congressmen get accused of many things, but no one justly accuses a congressional leader of enjoying a sinecure. The speaker of the house, in fact, commonly is conceded to be, next to the President, the most important individual in the American political system.

Successor.

To William B. Bankhead of Alabama, majority leader in the house of representatives, falls the task of succeeding the late Speaker Joseph W. Byrns. He was elected at a session of the house Thursday which lasted just 17 minutes.

This soft spoken Alabamian is a veteran of the house. Elected to the 45th congress in 1917, he has been returned from the same district ever since. In that time, he has come to be regarded as one of the ablest parliamentarians and strategists in the lower chamber.

Absent from official duties most of last year because of a heart ailment, he returned this year to get in the thick of the fight. Although he contested with the late Rep. Byrns for the speaker's honors, he is credited with being an enthusiastic new dealer and with having cooperated with Mr. Byrns in piloting the administration's program through congressional maze.

Political friends and opponents will wish him well in his difficult duties. Because he has been ill so recently, they will be happy to reflect that the imminent adjournment soon will give him time in which to rest and gain strength for the tasks ahead.

Distinction.

Ohio, apparently, is pleased with its junior United States senator. At least, there is no reason to believe the state is displeased.

Sen. Donahay is in Washington. He has a seat in the senate. He performs the routine of his office. He votes on senatorial measures.

He is not conspicuous; he does not seem to want to be conspicuous. He is not a new dealer and he is not an old dealer. In the words of Popeye the sailorman, edited for the occasion, the senator is what he is and that's all he is—Honest Vic Donahay of Ohio.

There are some, perhaps, who wish for more distinction in an United States senator. Still, it is plain that not every man who goes to the senate can be conspicuous. It is by no means desirable that all senators should stand in the spotlight.

For those who prefer a happy medium, somewhere between fame and obscurity, there has been offered some solace by West Virginia's young Sen. Holt, who says he and Sen. Donahay were the only senators not to introduce a single bill at the present session of congress. It's good to know that Sen. Donahay is not entirely without distinction in Washington.

Useful Knowledge.

Sleep is an aid to memory, declares a psychology professor. Ideas and words memorized just before one goes to sleep are the ones mostly easily recalled the next day.

The fact is known, but the cause is not yet clear. The professor is not certain whether the brain "coagulates" and holds the last minute ideas frozen over night or whether the brain works actively during sleep on those last impressions. Certain it is though, that wives will start whispering things in hubby's ear just before he gets ready to snore. In the morning, he will remember to mail the letter, pay the gas bill or walk on the other side of the street when he passes the landlord's house.

But wives must be warned. One highball will weaken the memory power and more than one might totally destroy it. Still, that's not surprising. There are cases on record of persons yet awake forgetting everything after succumbing to the highball urge.

Death of Speaker Blow To New Deal

Leadership in House Changes at Time When Man Close to White House Is Sorely Needed.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1936, by The Marion Star
WASHINGTON, June 6.—Into the already complicated situation of a session of congress stirring to end its labors has come a change in the speakership of the house of representatives at a critical moment.

The late Speaker Byrns was faithful to White House commands and yet skillful in maneuvering committee strategy so as to keep undesirable bills from coming to a vote.

Strangely enough, Mr. Byrns was a conservative at heart, but too loyal a party man to interpose his inner views against the irrefutable march of the new deal legislative demands.

Naturally, a speaker of the house who has the confidence of the President is so familiar with the inside workings of the administration mind that, overnight the same familiarity of viewpoint cannot be transmitted to a new presiding officer. It may be wondered how a presiding officer can exert so great an influence on legislative progress when his function is primarily to apply parliamentary rules. But nowdays the speaker is really a party leader, and, under the Roosevelt administration, he is really chief lieutenant and principal link between the executive and one house of congress. Likewise, if he is so disposed, he can stand up against unwise legislation, especially if his party colleagues insist that a particular measure's passage would be politically damaging to them.

Representative Bankhead of Alabama, who has just succeeded the late Mr. Byrns to the speakership, has not been in good health and has for many months been away from his post as majority leader. He is, of course, close to the White House and will play ball, as did his predecessor, but the management of new deal policies on the floor of the house will be in a somewhat unsettled condition just at a time when concentration and harmony of purpose is essential.

Over in the senate, on the other hand, where Vice President Garner—a former speaker of the house—is active in trying to carry out White House wishes, the situation is requiring all the tact and skill he can command. The friction on the Democratic side is noticeable. It has arisen particularly over the tax bill. There is no doubt that, if the majority were to consult their own wishes, they would drastically modify it. But on the President's pressing for passage of a bill somewhat along the lines of the measure that has passed the house, the Democrats naturally do not want to displease Mr. Roosevelt in a year in which so many of them are to have their names on the ballot with him for reelection. The general impression is that Mr. Roosevelt will accept a compromise and that the new tax law will neither raise the desired revenue nor please anybody, including its sponsors.

What really is in the background of the whole situation is that the tax bill is the only "must" measure and yet until it is finally put through the conference committee, congress is subject to pressure by groups that have favorable measures to push. Some of these bills will be embarrassing politically when the voters have them explained. Yet the President would be embarrassed with the sponsors if he vetoed any of them. It would be to his advantage, therefore, to have the bills die in conference. The longer the session drags on, the more opportunity there is for these extraneous bills to be forced into a roll call. And when that movement comes, the bills cannot be defeated, as, on a show-down, the administration must go ahead with them and render support.

Thus it is that a few days' delay and the change in speakership may affect the final record of laws passed at this session of congress and vitally affect also the economic system.

Glancing Backward

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, June 6, 1926.
More than 1,000 members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles attended dedication of the Marion aerie's new quarters on West Center street. Conrad H. Mann of Kansas City, past grand president, gave the principal address.

Behind the News

Men and Affairs Under The Washington Spotlight.

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The official excuses for the hasty makeshift reorganization of the house leadership were valid enough, but there was one which was not mentioned.

The White House could not afford to have a fight now. Delay would certainly have caused a serious contest. Mr. Bankhead would undoubtedly have been elected speaker in the end, but who would have become floor leader is uncertain. The only sure thing is that there would have been a split reaching down into the ranks of the northern and southern wings of the party organization.

That is why Mr. Bankhead took hold of things immediately. It may be denied now, but President Roosevelt was called out of bed and personally counseled Bankhead in the course taken.

Thus, within eleven hours after Speaker Byrns' death, the whole matter was settled for eight months to come, without a tussle, without a murmur, in fact, before anyone had a chance to speak.

What the change means fundamentally is that Mr. Roosevelt now has a really ardent new deal believer in charge of one house of congress. Bankhead is far more new dealish personally than Byrns was.

The Alabamian even likes the Tugwell rural resettlement administration which is generally considered the ultimate test of White House devotion. He has championed such things as the cotton control act, the billion-dollar farm tenant bill. He has not said much about the Constitution and has questioned the advisability of spending, but these are his only two faults as far as the new deal left wingers are concerned.

It may not seem to mean much to the mind of the street, but it is highly important as far as the inner handling of congress by the President is concerned.

This is not intended to imply that Byrns was short on loyalty in any respect. The new dealers howled before his election about his traditional political schooling, but they never had occasion to mention it afterward. Also both Byrns and Bankhead have more friends than any other two men in the house.

Bankhead was first elected floor leader when he was sick at a hospital.

How the floor leadership fight would have developed cannot be told. Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee rated the job. It

New York Notes

O. O. McIntyre's Diary of Fact, Fancy and Folks.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Here's the trusting salt again arriving for dinner at the specified time—8 o'clock. The way it looks around this place I don't believe they have been up (or breakfast). It wouldn't surprise me for the hostess to come straggling through the room in her nightgown.

No, there's a fellow in full evening dress. But what's he doing straightening a rug? I get it. The hired butler. One of those on quick call at the agency. I had him one night myself. He's dusting off things. Maybe he will take me for one of the antiques and give me a going over.

Sound of a motor outside. Only the ice cream wagon. I used to roll a mean ice cream freezer myself. There's no wall picture. I'd like to strengthen but the last one I fooled with got out of control. The thing to do is to sit quietly and wait for the others.

If that hired butler has nothing else to do he might give me the once over. I haven't shaved since I left home. Someone drawing a bath on an upper floor. Belling at 8:35 for a dinner at 8. Maybe they called it off and I didn't get the message. I'll peek in the dining room. Covers laid for 14 all right. I suppose they'll seat me next to one of those out-door girls. All bronzed up to make me look like Death Takes a Holiday. Or one of those girly-girls fluffs who thinks it would be fun to sneak off and see Life and Josephine Baker.

Nine o'clock and all is dandy. They had me in mind when they wrote that song, "Dinner for One." James Buzz of the door bell. The florist's boy. I'll take lilies—one for each hand. The bell again. This time a guest. Very British. A little of old fruit, what? And running to teeth. The minor type. He's had a heastily increasing. The captain on the bridge all the way over. London bridge is falling down. I'm edging into one of my spells. I'll ask him if he's been grouse shooting this season. How are things along the moors and all that? I'll skirt a little Scotch for him. I'll do nothing of the sort. I did not come here to entertain visiting Englishmen. Hands across the sea, my aunt. He'll tip me. My motto is: Feet under the table.

Nine thirty and still just. The Limey and I have arrived. He's beginning to grow restless. Maybe he'd like to join me in diagramming a few sentences. With that Ole Bill mustache he's the image of a walrus pup. Ah, our hostess! Sorry to be a bit tardy but her boys at Harvard had her on the phone. Impetuous darlings. They had just pressed her two show girls through a wind-shield, all ball and all that. Youth having a fling, as it were. Did Parkinson fix cocktails? The night I had him his name was Meadows. Husband, too, will be late. Ran into a flock of trans-Atlantic calls just as he was leaving the office. I know the gag. He's trying to cut loose from some daze in a West 34th street bar and will come barging in with an image that would cut floating silk. And dabs of rouge on his cheek.

Now they are arriving. With a swoop. Most of them six drinks in the clear and leaping. I see my buddy for the evening but he doesn't know it. Tall, lean, halitosis and dour with the bitterness of life. And crooked to the arm pits. When he begins to sob out loud you'll find him hanging around my neck. And a little later you'll find him inviting me to step out where there are no ladies so he can knock me into the middle of next January.

My wife elected to go to the theater and drop in later. That's a slick way of ducking a dull dinner and offering no one a share of it among you, with love and kisses. I go any place they ask me—the Kin Hubbard fellow who would go up on the stage if the hypnotist beckoned.

G. O. P. Convention Preliminary Occupies Spotlight.

BY DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Staff Writer
Out of a welter of claims, counter-claims and stenographic errors will emerge next week the name of the Republican nominee for President.

This week Cleveland prepared for the great American spectacle, the national convention of a major party. Congress abandoned at eleven o'clock attempt to adjourn before the party convalesced. The sudden death of Speaker Byrns slowed to a snail's pace by the squabble over the tax bill.

Outstanding among the week's developments was the supreme court opinion invalidating New York state's minimum wage law which fixed a general level of remuneration for women and children in industry.

Constitutional Limits
The court had said that federal government, with such instruments as NIRA and the Guffey act, invaded the sovereignty of the states. It appended the ruling that state lacked the sovereign power to enact a law establishing minimum wages. Seven states besides New York had done so.

Commentators wondered whether there would be a blank in either or both of the major party platforms, urging "constitutional changes."

Rep. Fish of New York said it would offer a Republican platform proposing an amendment to permit state minimum wage legislation, and President Roosevelt served that the court's opinion had created a no man's land between national and state powers when in no one could legislate.

Hope, Collected.
A coalition ticket proposal, with a Democrat as the Republican nominee's running mate, met mixed reception. Those opposed it argued it might weaken a party front in November.

The week's glist of political news included an acceptance of former President Hoover, titled head of the party, of an invitation to address the convention, and a series of announcements by various delegates that they would vote for London.

The President prepared to spend next week on a midwest and southwest tour, delivering speeches. Democrats, denying intended stealing of Republican thunder, insisted the identity dates with the Cleveland convention was a mere coincidence.

Rep. Bankhead of Alabama, father of the tempestuous Tallie Byrns, whose state funeral yesterday was a tribute to the life character of one of the nation's most valued elder statesmen.

Francis' internal affairs department the foreign picture. Between the lines of cablegrams and general strikes could be read the situation. The "left" appeared demonstrated because it expressed sympathy from the cultured I Blum, the first Socialist premise the history of the third republic.

An official tribunal found J. H. Thomas, resigned British colonial secretary, had betrayed his secrets. It was Britain's best political scandal in years. The cabinet's South China experiment declared war on Japanese troops moved into the island area. But until, and if, a realissimo Chiang Kai-Shek Nanking acts, the move can be little weight.

Special assessments. New delinquent county specials amounted to $4,000, township roads $2,000, and municipal specials $3,000.

While the city's share of the tax distribution amounted to $120,500, after deductions were taken out a check for only $9,253.33 was received to be placed in the general fund for current operating expenses. The bond retirement fund received $4,283.15, the police pension fund $2,621.74, and a firemen's pension fund $1,712.92. This makes a total of $107,957.37, the amount the city actually received in the distribution yesterday. The balance of the $120,500.00 is represented in deductions made for advance draws paid to the city, election expenses, housing relief, workmen's compensation fund, cost of examinations and taxes withheld. The city had made advance draws of $11,000 from its general fund and $15,000 from its bond retirement fund.

WORTHWHILE USES.

The fire department can use it to spot rundown areas. Police and health departments can use our charts to locate districts where the sanitary conditions are poor. Zoning boards and boards of education can use the maps for planning city improvements and locating new schools.

Will Be Aid to Business

"After national results are tabulated they will be invaluable to the building, real estate, insurance and financing companies," Mr. Hobart declared. "For example, if a national plumbing manufacturer wants to find the best market for his goods, he can look up sanitary conditions and send his salesman to the territory where the greatest market exists."

Will Be Aid to Business

"We have every reason to believe that local authorities will make use of the information we are collecting in Marion county," said Mr. Hobart.

"The federal government has spent a lot of money getting this information. When the tables are completed, our task is over. After that it will be up to the local authorities to make good use of the information."

Marion is one of the 12 cities in Ohio where real property inventories are being conducted by the WPA. Other cities include Columbus, Akron, Canton, Lima, Salem, Steubenville and Marietta. The real property inventory in Cleveland is an annual program, carried on by the real estate and financial interests of the city.

Will Be Aid to Business

Enumeration in the Marion project includes the built-up area outside the city limits, as well as all homes, business and industrial establishments within the city. Although no householders were forced to answer questions, less than 25 Marion residents refused to give the required information.

Will Be Aid to Business

When filled out, the inventory blank answers such questions as length of time occupants have lived in each dwelling, monthly rents, services included in the rent, number of rooms and condition of each house, conveniences such as hot and cold water, lighting, heating, refrigeration and sanitary equipment, age and race of the residents, number of extra families in each house and value of entire property. Types of dwellings and number of vacant living units are also enumerated.

Will Be Aid to Business

Following the enumeration, which was completed on April 3, a staff of editors and tabulators in the central office classified the cards and since that date have been tabulating the results. The complete result of the Marion inventory will be summarized in 36 tables and incorporated in 17 detailed maps of the city.

Will Be Aid to Business

Checkers' Authenticity Data. To insure accuracy of the inventory "spot checkers" were sent back to many of the houses and their cards compared with those of the original enumerators. A force of surveyors checked measurements, building areas and other data necessary to map the city. Information on individual homes is considered confidential. Any city-wide and other block tabulations being announced in the final report, being prepared by Mr. Hobart.

Will Be Aid to Business

"The information we are collecting will have many definite and worthwhile uses," Mr. Hobart said.

When filled out, the inventory blank answers such questions as length of time occupants have lived in each dwelling, monthly rents, services included in the rent, number of rooms and condition of each house, conveniences such as hot and cold water, lighting, heating, refrigeration and sanitary equipment, age and race of the residents, number of extra families in each house and value of entire property. Types of dwellings and number of vacant living units are also enumerated.

Following the enumeration, which was completed on April 3, a staff of editors and tabulators in the central office classified the cards and since that date have been tabulating the results. The complete result of the Marion inventory will be summarized in 36 tables and incorporated in 17 detailed maps of the city.

Checkers' Authenticity Data. To insure accuracy of the inventory "spot checkers" were sent back to many of the houses and their cards compared with those of the original enumerators. A force of surveyors checked measurements, building areas and other data necessary to map the city. Information on individual homes is considered confidential. Any city-wide and other block tabulations being announced in the final report, being prepared by Mr. Hobart.

"The information we are collecting will have many definite and worthwhile uses," Mr. Hobart said.

The fire department can use it to spot rundown areas. Police and health departments can use our charts to locate districts where the sanitary conditions are poor. Zoning boards and boards of education can use the maps for planning city improvements and locating new schools.

"After national results are tabulated they will be invaluable to the building, real estate, insurance and financing companies," Mr. Hobart declared. "For example, if a national plumbing manufacturer wants to find the best market for his goods, he can look up sanitary conditions and send his salesman to the territory where the greatest market exists."

"We have every reason to believe that local authorities will make use of the information we are collecting in Marion county," said Mr. Hobart.

"The federal government has spent a lot of money getting this information. When the tables are completed, our task is over. After that it will be up to the local authorities to make good use of the information."

Marion is one of the 12 cities in Ohio where real property inventories are being conducted by the WPA. Other cities include Columbus, Akron, Canton, Lima, Salem, Steubenville and Marietta. The real property inventory in Cleveland is an annual program, carried on by the real estate and financial interests of the city.

Enumeration in the Marion project includes the built-up area outside the city limits, as well as all homes, business and industrial establishments within the city. Although no householders were forced to answer questions, less than 25 Marion residents refused to give the required information.
